

JBC/GAI MANAGING PRINCIPAL

Sam E. Mousa, P.E., brings more than 30 years of administrative, engineering, and construction experience to your project. As Managing Principal at JBC Planning and Engineering, Inc., he is responsible for the daily business operations of the organization, oversees all planning and engineering activities, and markets corporate functions.

Prior to his current tenure as Executive Vice President with J.B. Coxwell Contracting, Inc. and Managing Principal of JBC Planning & Engineering, Mr. Mousa enjoyed a long and prestigious career as a public servant, culminating in his Mayoral appointment as Chief Administrative Officer (CAO) for the City of Jacksonville. As CAO, he was responsible for the daily management and operations of all City departments, as well as the $2.25 billion Better Jacksonville Plan. He previously served the City as Deputy Chief Administrative Officer, Director of Public Works, and as a City Engineer.

Sam Mousa's extensive background in engineering, construction, and successful management of major projects for public entities and the private sector comprises the precise knowledge, skills, and experience required in the development industry. Understanding your requirements, he has assembled a team of supremely qualified staff to provide the cost-effective and comprehensive services that make project management in its entirety seem effortless.
